PRESENTS

Noble Cunningham

Professor of History, University of Missouri, Columbia

Popular Images of the Presidency

Images of Presidents in the popular mind, accurate or otherwise, are central to our selection of our head of state. The history of the Presidency is filled with images of railsplitters, men born in log cabins, military heroes, Horatio Alger "rags-to-riches" stories, womanizers, and crooks. Cunningham asserts that these popular perceptions are central to understanding the Presidency itself and the way we select our leaders.
